

About the Editor and Authors

About the Editor

Bradley T. Erford, PhD, LCPC, NCC, LPC, LP, LSP, is a professor in the school counseling program of the Education Specialties Department in the School of Education at Loyola University Maryland. He was the 61st President of the American Counseling Association (ACA, 2012–2013). He is the recipient of the ACA Research Award, ACA Extended Research Award, ACA Arthur A. Hitchcock Distinguished Professional Service Award, ACA Professional Development Award, and ACA Carl D. Perkins Government Relations Award. He was also inducted as an ACA Fellow. He has received the Association for Assessment and Research in Counseling (AARC) AARC/MECD Research Award, AARC Exemplary Practices Award, AARC President's Merit Award, the Association for Counselor Education and Supervision's (ACES) Robert O. Stripling Award for Excellence in Standards, Maryland Association for Counseling and Development (MACD) Maryland Counselor of the Year, MACD Counselor Advocacy Award, MACD Professional Development Award, and MACD Counselor Visibility Award. He is the editor of numerous texts including: Orientation to the Counseling Profession (Pearson Merrill, 2010, 2014), Developing Multicultural Counseling Competence: A System's Approach (Pearson Merrill, 2010, 2014), Crisis Intervention and Prevention (Pearson Merrill, 2010, 2014), Applying Techniques to Common Encounters in School Counseling: A Case-Based Approach (Pearson Merrill, 2014), Group Work in the Schools (Pearson Merrill, 2010), Group Work: Process and Applications (Pearson Merrill, 2011), Transforming the School Counseling Profession (Pearson Merrill, 2003, 2007, 2011, 2015), Professional School Counseling: A Handbook of Principles, Programs and Practices (PRO-ED, 2004, 2010, 2016), Assessment for Counselors (Cengage, 2007, 2013), Research and Evaluation in Counseling (Cengage, 2008, 2014), and The Counselor's Guide to Clinical, Personality and Behavioral Assessment (Cengage, 2006); and co-author of six more books: Mastering the NCE and CPCE (Pearson Merrill, 2011, 2015), 40 Techniques Every Counselor Should Know (Merrill/Prentice-Hall, 2010, 2016), Free Access Assessment Instruments for Common Mental Health and Addiction Issues (Routledge, 2013), Educational Applications of the WISC-IV (Western Psychological Services, 2006), and Group Activities: Firing Up for Performance (Pearson Merrill, 2007). He was the General Editor of The American Counseling Association Encyclopedia of Counseling (ACA, 2009). His research specialization falls primarily in development and technical analysis of psycho-educational tests and outcome research and has resulted in the publication of more than 60 refereed journal articles, 100 book chapters, and a dozen published tests. He was a representative to the ACA Governing Council and the ACA 20/20 Visioning Committee. He is a past president and past treasurer of AARC, past chair and parliamentarian of the American Counseling Association–Southern (US) Region; past-chair of ACA's Task Force on High Stakes Testing; past chair of ACA's Standards for Test Users Task Force; past chair of ACA's Interprofessional Committee; past chair of the ACA Public Awareness and Support Committee (co-chair of the National Awards Sub-committee); past-chair of the Convention and past chair of the Screening Assessment Instruments Committees for AARC; past president of the Maryland Association for Counseling and Development (MACD); past president of Maryland Association for Measurement and Evaluation (MAME); past president of Maryland Association for Counselor Education and Supervision (MACES); and past president of the Maryland Association for Mental Health Counselors (MAMHC). He was also an associate editor of the Journal of Counseling & Development. Dr. Erford has been a faculty member at Loyola since 1993 and is a Licensed Clinical Professional Counselor, Licensed Professional Counselor, Nationally Certified Counselor, Licensed Psychologist and Licensed School Psychologist. Prior to arriving at Loyola, Dr. Erford was a school psychologist/counselor in the Chesterfield County (VA) Public Schools. He maintains a private practice specializing in assessment and treatment of children and adolescents. A graduate of The University of Virginia (PhD), Bucknell University (MA), and Grove City College (BS), he teaches courses in Testing and Measurement, Life-span Development, Research and Evaluation in Counseling, School Counseling, and Stress Management.

About the Authors

Lyndon P. Abrams earned a PhD in counseling from Texas A&M University–Commerce. He is a Nationally Certified Counselor and has professional counseling experience in community settings. Dr. Abrams is currently an associate professor in the Department of Counseling at the University of North Carolina at Charlotte.

Jason B. Baker, PhD, LPC, is an assistant professor in the Department of Psychology at Millersville University. As a licensed professional counselor, Jason has worked therapeutically with children, adolescents, and adults in community, school, and home settings and brings these experiences to his writing and teaching.

Gerta Bardhoshi, PhD, is an assistant professor of counselor education at the University of South Dakota. Her specialty areas include working with children and families in public schools, especially rural areas, as well as comprehensive school counseling program creation and evaluation.

Dorothy Breen, PhD, is a retired professor of counselor education at the University of Maine. She is a psychologist in private practice in rural Maine. She attained her master's degree in counselor education and doctorate in counseling psychology from the University of Wisconsin.

Lela Kosteck Bunch is the executive director of the Missouri School Counselor Association. Prior to taking her current position, she was an assistant professor in the Division of Counseling and Family Therapy at the University of Missouri–St. Louis. She also served for 3 years as the director of guidance and placement for the Missouri Department of Elementary and Secondary Education. She has a PhD in School Psychology with an emphasis in educational and family systems from the University of Missouri–Columbia and a master's degree in School Counseling from Pittsburg State University.

David J. Carter received a PhD from the University of Nebraska at Lincoln. He is the Peter Kiewit Professor and clinical supervisor in counselor education at the University of Nebraska at Omaha. His private practice work is with children and adolescents. He is a past president of the Nebraska Counseling Association and continues to serve on the American Counseling Association's Professional Standards Committee.

Patricia Carter is a Nebraska Licensed Independent Mental Health Practitioner and has accumulated over 20 years of experience in the social services field and as a professional counselor in private practice. She is Board Certified in neurofeedback and founder of the Carter Counseling Center in Omaha, Nebraska.

Mary Ann Clark, PhD, NCC, is a professor emerita in the Counselor Education Program at the University of Florida, Gainesville. She has been a professional school counselor and administrator in stateside and overseas schools prior to her university work. Dr. Clark has served as a consultant and speaker to school and community groups on topics including student assessment, school safety and violence prevention, and small-group counseling. Her areas of special interest include gender differences in educational achievement, student success factors, character education, university/school partnerships, and career development.

Carol A. Dahir is the chair of the School Counseling Department at NYIT. She has extensive experience working with state departments of education, school systems, and school counselor associations and organizations on delivering and evaluating comprehensive school counseling programs. She served as the project director for the ASCA National Standards development and Planning for Life initiative. She also served on the governing boards for the American School Counselor Association and the National Career Development Association. She focuses her research and presentations on college and career readiness, accountability, principal-counselor relationships, cultural competence, and continuous improvement for school counselors.

Joyce A. DeVoss, PhD, is a professor and coordinator of the MEd school counseling program at Northern Arizona University in Tucson. Her research and scholarly interests include school counselor leadership and advocacy and social/emotional learning in K–12. She has also worked as a professional school counselor, agency counselor, psychologist, and organizational consultant. She has written a book, book chapters, and journal articles relevant to school counseling. She is the Chair of the Education and Professional Development Committee for the North American Society for Adlerian Psychology (NASAP) and an active member of the Research Committee for the Arizona School Counselors Association.

R. Anthony Doggett, PhD, is a school psychologist with Fluency Plus, LLC, providing professional consultation services in the areas of school-wide positive behavior interventions and supports, response to intervention, function-based behavioral supports, tiered academic interventions, data-based decision making, and intervention compliance and integrity. He is the former graduate coordinator of the Department of Counseling and Educational Psychology and program coordinator of the School Psychology program at Mississippi State University. Dr. Doggett received his PhD in school psychology from The University of Southern Mississippi. He completed a predoctoral internship and a 1-year postdoctoral fellowship in behavioral pediatrics at the Munroe-Meyer Institute for Genetics and Rehabilitation in Omaha, Nebraska. He has served as the president of the Mississippi Association for Psychology in the Schools and a professional consultant to several school districts or state departments of education.

Deborah L. Drew, EdD, is an associate professor and director of the graduate counseling and human relations program at Husson University in Bangor, Maine. In her private practice, she provides counseling, consultation, and supervision to rural Maine counselors and school systems. Formerly, she was a professional school counselor in rural areas of Maine. She attained her master's degree and doctorate in counselor education from the University of Maine.

Suzanne M. Dugger, EdD, is a professor in the Department of Leadership and Counseling at Eastern Michigan University where she serves as the Coordinator of the School Counseling program. Dr. Dugger also developed EMU's course on postsecondary planning for school counselors and is in the process of finalizing a textbook, Foundations of Career Counseling: A Case-Based Approach, which will be published by Pearson. She holds credentials as a school teacher, school counselor and Licensed Professional Counselor in Michigan.

Mardi Kay Fallon has an EdD in counselor education from the University of Cincinnati. She currently works for Central Clinic and is a contract therapist for Hyde Park Counseling Professionals.

Sejal Parikh Foxx is an assistant professor and director of the counseling and school counseling program at the University of North Carolina at Charlotte. As a former school counselor, she developed a passion for multicultural counseling with a special focus in social justice and advocacy. She spends her academic time training school counselors, conducting research, and serving the community. Dr. Parikh Foxx also has experience in building university-school partnerships which keeps her grounded and focused on current issues in education and school counseling. She has presented over 60 conference presentations and invited workshops during the past decade on topics such as multiculturalism, solution-focused counseling, and building comprehensive school programs.

Nadine E. Garner, EdD, LPC, is an associate professor in the school counseling program of the Psychology Department at Millersville University of Pennsylvania. She is the founder and director of the Center for Sustainability and the chair of the Sustainability Committee. Dr. Garner is co-author of the book A School With Solutions: Implementing a Solution-Focused/Adlerian-Based Comprehensive School Counseling Program (ASCA, 1998). As a former K-12 professional school counselor at Scotland School for Veterans' Children, Dr. Garner developed a comprehensive conflict resolution/peer mediation program.

Donna M. Gibson is an associate professor of counselor education at Virginia Commonwealth University. She has worked with families and children in public schools, hospitals, private practice, and clinics as a counselor and psychologist.

Gary E. Goodnough is professor and chair of the Counselor Education and School Psychology Department at Plymouth State University. He has worked in public schools as a teacher, professional school counselor, and director of guidance. Gary consults regularly with school districts on comprehensive school counseling programs. He is the author of more than 20 articles and book chapters and is the co-editor of Leadership, Advocacy and Direct Service Strategies for Professional School Counselors.

Henry L. Harris is a former secondary school counselor and military veteran. He is a Licensed Professional Counselor and a licensed school counselor in the state of North Carolina. He is also professor and Chair of the Department of Counseling at UNC Charlotte.

Trish Hatch, PhD, is the author of The Use of Data in School Counseling: Hatching Results for Students, Programs and the Profession (2014); co-author of the ASCA National Model: A Framework for School Counseling Programs (ASCA, 2003, 2005) and co-author of Evidence-Based Practice in School Counseling: Making a Difference with Data-Driven Practices (Dimmit, Carey, & Hatch, 2007). Dr. Hatch is the Director of the school counseling program and associate professor at San Diego State University and the Executive Director of the Center for Excellence in School Counseling and Leadership (CESCaL), in the College of Education at SDSU. A former school counselor and administrator, Dr. Hatch has served in multiple leadership roles including Supervisor/Post-Secondary Level Vice President of the American School Counselor Association (ASCA). Multiple state and national awards include ASCA's Administrator of the Year Award and the Mary Gehrke Lifetime Achievement Award. As President and CEO of Hatching Results® LLC, Dr. Hatch provides training and consulting on evidenced-based practice and the use of data to improve outcomes for students, programs, and the profession. (www.hatchingresults.com)

Carlen Henington, PhD, NCSP, is an associate professor in the school psychology program at Mississippi State University, where she is program coordinator and directs the Summer Academic Clinic for children who are referred for academic and behavior concerns. Her research and professional interests include evaluation and implementation of academic and behavioral interventions, and assessment and intervention in early childhood.

Susan Norris Huss, LPC, is an associate professor in the mental health and school counseling program at Bowling Green State University in Ohio. She received her PhD in counselor education from the University of Toledo after being a professional school counselor for 23 years. Dr. Huss has extensive experience in working with bereavement in schools. For 20 years, she led loss support groups for students who experienced a death. She has presented at local, state, and national levels in the area of bereavement and legal and ethical issues and has conducted research related to the efficacy of school-based loss support groups for parentally bereaved students. Dr. Huss is a past president of the Ohio Counseling Association, the Ohio Association of Counselor Education and Supervision and currently serves on the American Counseling Association Ethics Committee.

Brian Hutchison, LPC, NCC, is currently an assistant professor, Coordinator of the School Counseling Program, and International Studies Fellow at the University of Missouri–St. Louis. He received his PhD in counselor education and supervision from Penn State University in 2009. His scholarly work is focused on the study of social class bias in the delivery of school counseling interventions, international school and career counseling, counselor feelings of social class dissonance as it applies to their work, and the delivery of interventions that incorporate the concept of human agency and social justice as it impacts the development of underserved and international populations.

C. Marie Jackson, EdD, is a former counselor education faculty member at the University of West Georgia. She has a master's degree in counseling from Jacksonville State University and a doctoral degree in counselor education from the University of Alabama. She has experience in public schools as a teacher, psychometrist, and a school counselor, K–12. She has been program leader for school counseling training programs in three university settings. In addition to her school counseling credentials and experience, she was a Licensed Professional Counselor and a Nationally Certified Counselor, and has worked in a psychiatric hospital outpatient setting as a therapist.

Gregory R. Janson is an associate professor of child and family studies at Ohio University, Athens. A Professional Clinical Counselor and Clinical Supervisor, Dr. Janson has worked extensively in community mental health and private practice as a trauma specialist and family counselor with severely disturbed children and adolescents and their families, and as a forensic examiner. A former therapeutic foster parent, his current research interests focus on the impact of emotional maltreatment in classrooms, PTSD, and risk assessment with behavioral intervention teams in higher education. Other research interests focus on issues affecting gay, lesbian, bisexual, and transgendered adolescents and their families Kalinda R. Jones is an assistant professor of school counseling at Loyola University Maryland. She earned her PhD in Guidance and Psychological Services with a specialization in counseling psychology from Indiana State University. She received her BA in biology education from Olivet Nazarene University and her MA in school counseling at Eastern Michigan University. Drawing on 20 years of experience as an educator and counselor primarily with underserved students and clients, her current research involves the career development of children and adolescents as well as the training of counselors to work cross-culturally.

Gerald A. Juhnke, EdD, LPC, NCC, MAC, LCAS, ACS, is professor at The University of Texas at San Antonio. He is the past president of the International Association for Addictions and Offender Counseling (IAAOC) and the Association for Assessment in Counseling (AAC). Jerry is a former editor of the Journal of Addictions and Offender Counseling and a past co-chair of the American Counseling Association's Council of Journal Editors. He has authored or edited eight books and has more than 48 refereed journal articles that have either been published or are currently in press. Jerry's direct clinical counseling and clinical supervision histories includes independent practice, community mental health, corrections, and schools. Jerry's most recent book is Counseling Addicted Families: An Integrated Assessment and Treatment Model.

Carol J. Kaffenberger is an associate professor emerita at George Mason University in Fairfax, Virginia. Currently she teaches school counselor preparation courses at Johns Hopkins University and is a consultant for the American School Counselor Association (ASCA) and Virginia school districts, providing training for practicing school counselors in the development of comprehensive school counseling programs and the use of accountability strategies. She is the associate editor for practitioner research for the Professional School Counseling journal. Kaffenberger was on the ASCA National Model (3rd ed.) Advisory Board and served as a Counselor Educator VP for ASCA. Previously she was an elementary school counselor. She is the co-author of publications developed to help practicing school counselors align their school counseling programs with the ASCA National Model and use data. She has also conducted a research study on the school reentry issues of children with cancer and developed a model for school reintegration for students with chronic illnesses. She provides training to practicing school counselors, social workers, and public health nurses. Her writing interests include supporting students with chronic illness, the transformation of school counseling programs, and training school counselors to use data to drive program development and evaluation.

ZiYoung Kang is a doctoral candidate in the counselor education program at the Pennsylvania State University. She earned a master's degree in counseling at Seoul National University (SNU), Korea. Prior to pursuing her doctoral degree, she worked as a counselor and a Campus Mentoring Program coordinator at SNU, and then as a researcher, mentor, and lecturer of Won Coaching Program for Adolescents at the Won Buddhism Bureau of Adolescents, in Seoul, Korea. She is currently a counseling intern at the Penn State Career Services.

Margaret A. King is a professor emerita in early childhood teacher education at Ohio University. Dr. King served as secretary and governing board member of the National Association for the Education of Young Children. She has written and presented on emotional maltreatment by school personnel, boys and guidance, best teaching practices, and teacher development.

Vivian V. Lee is associate professor in the Department of Counselling in the Faculty for Social Wellbeing at the University of Malta. She serves as the Coordinator of Supervision for both the Transcultural Counselling Master's and the Master's in Counselling degrees. Dr. Lee is the past president of the Maryland Association for Counseling and Development and held a leadership position in the Pennsylvania Counseling Association. Lee has authored and co-authored articles and book chapters on conflict resolution and violence, group counseling, and equity-focused systemic and data-driven school counseling programs. Lee recently completed a nine year collaborative library building project in Ghana with colleagues from the United States and Ghana as an outgrowth of a Fulbright-Hays Scholars Group Project. She was a recipient of the O'Hana Award in 2008 by the Counselors for Social Justice. Lee is the former Senior Director, Counselor Advocacy at the National Office for School Counselor Advocacy of The College Board. Lee worked to transform counselor training, practice, and policy at the state and national level. Dr. Lee is an accomplished trainer and presenter at the international and national levels and has held academic posts as a counselor educator at University of Maryland, Old Dominion University, and University of Scranton. She received both master's and doctoral degrees in Counselor Education and Supervision from the University of Virginia.

Dana Heller Levitt is associate professor of counseling at Montclair State University. Dr. Levitt has nearly 20 years of experience in counseling and counselor education. In addition to her previous clinical work and research in the areas of eating disorders and body image, she has contributed to scholarship in areas of ethical practice, counselor development, and religious and spiritual issues in counseling.

Lynn E. Linde is clinical assistant professor and the director of clinical experiences in the school counseling program at Loyola University Maryland. She received her master's degree in school counseling and her doctorate in counseling from George Washington University. She was previously the chief of the Student Services and Alternative Programs Branch at the Maryland State Department of Education, the state specialist for school counseling, a local school system counseling supervisor, a middle and high school counselor, and a special education teacher. Dr. Linde was the 2009–2010 President and the 2012–2013 Treasurer of the American Counseling Association. She is an ACA Fellow and has received a number of awards, including the 2013 ACA President's Award for contributions to the profession, as well as awards from the state of Maryland for her work in student services and youth suicide prevention. She has been a chair and member of the ACA Ethics Committee, Ethics Appeal Panel, and Ethics Revision Task Force for the 2014 ACA Code of Ethics. She has made numerous presentations, particularly in the areas of ethics and legal issues for counselors and public policy and legislation, over the course of her career. She has authored or co-authored a number of book chapters and articles on counseling ethics and has taught the Professional Issues and Ethics course in Loyola's school counseling program for over 15 years. Dr. Linde is also a certified True Colors trainer.

Sandra M. Logan is a doctoral fellow in the counselor education and supervision program at the University of Florida. She earned her master's degree and credential in school counseling at Chapman University in California. Prior to pursuing her doctorate, she worked as an elementary and middle school counselor and held the role of district Tobacco Use, Prevention, and Education (TUPE) coordinator. Her specific research interests include school counseling supervision, leadership development, and professional identity development of counselor educators.

Belinda J. Lopez, PhD, LPC-S, NCC, CSC, earned an MS in counseling and a PhD in counselor education from Texas A&M University–Corpus Christi. She is an assistant professor of counselor education at Lamar University. Her experiences include work as a professional school counselor, teaching, supervision of counselor interns for certification and state licensure, and leadership in local, state and national organizations.

Patricia Jo McDivitt began her career as an educator, serving as a classroom teacher and/or counselor for 12 years. In addition to her teaching experience, she is past president of the Association for Assessment in Counseling and Education (AACE). During her year as president, Ms. McDivitt was co-editor of the Measurement and Evaluation in Counseling and Development (MECD) special edition, Large-Scale Assessment and High-Stakes Testing. Since 1995, Ms. McDivitt has served as a member of the Joint Committee on Standards for Educational Evaluation (JCSEE) where she was instrumental in the development and launch of The Student Evaluation Standards. She most recently served as the Joint Committee's vice chair and is currently serving as the co-chair of the revision task force for the Classroom Assessment Standards.

Adriana G. McEachern, PhD, NCC, CRC, LMHC, is a counselor education associate professor and program director in the College of Education at Florida International University. She received her doctorate in counselor education from the University of Florida. She is past president of the Florida Counseling Association and past chair of the American Counseling Association Southern Region. She has published numerous articles in the areas of child abuse, exceptional students and exceptional student education, and multicultural issues.

Carol Z. A. McGinnis, PhD, LCPC, NCC, is a pastoral counselor and assistant professor in the graduate counseling program at Messiah College in Mechanicsburg, PA. Her research and clinical interests relate to anger as a positive emotion and online Xbox video gaming as a factor in young adult and family counseling. She also serves as Clinical Director for the Amazon Warrior Institute (AWI) at Fairview United Methodist Church in Phoenix, MD.

Robika Modak Mylroie, PhD, is an adjunct professor in the counseling and special populations department at Lamar University. Her research interests include childhood obesity and its impact on children personally, socially, and academically.

Amy J. Newmeyer, MD, completed a postdoctoral fellowship at the Kennedy-Krieger Institute at the Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine upon completion of her medical degree from Ohio State University and residency from Akron Children's Hospital. She is double boarded in pediatrics and neuro-development disabilities and is currently on faculty at Children's Hospital of the King's Daughters in Norfolk, VA.

Mark D. Newmeyer, EdD, is an assistant professor in the School of Psychology and Counseling at Regent University where he serves as the coordinator of the PhD program in Counselor Education and Supervision. He has a background in a variety of school settings providing behavioral evaluation, testing, and assessment. His current research efforts include understanding parental stress, training effective group workers, and the protective factors in preventing compassion fatigue among counselors.

Spencer G. Niles is the Dean for the School of Education at The College of William & Mary and previously served as a Distinguished Professor and Department Head for Educational Psychology, Counseling, and Special Education at Pennsylvania State University. Dr. Niles is the recipient of the National Career Development Association's (NCDA) Eminent Career Award, a Fellow of the American Counseling Association (ACA) and NCDA, the recipient of ACA's President's Award, David Brooks Distinguished Mentor Award, Extended Research Award, the Thomas J. Sweeney Visionary Leadership and Advocacy Award, and the University of British Columbia's Noted Scholar Award. He served as President for the National Career Development Association and Editor for The Career Development Quarterly. Niles was the Editor of the Journal of Counseling & Development and serves on six additional editorial boards for national and international journals. He is also on the advisory board for the International Centre for Career Development and Public Policy. Dr. Niles has authored or co-authored approximately 120 publications and delivered over 125 presentations on career development theory and practice.

Melissa Nowicki is a graduate of Mount Vernon Nazarene University with bachelor's degrees in psychology and sociology. She is currently working on a master's in school counseling at Bowling Green State University.

Ralph L. Piedmont is a professor of pastoral counseling at Loyola University Maryland. His research interests include the five-factor model of personality and its relationship to spiritual phenomena. He has also developed a motivationally based measure of spirituality, the Assessment of Spirituality and Religious Sentiments (ASPIRES) scale, and is interested in documenting its predictive validity in a number of applied contexts.

Mark Pope, EdD, NCC, MCC, ACS, MAC, is professor and chair of the Department of Counseling & Family Therapy in the College of Education at the University of Missouri–Saint Louis, where his specialties include career counseling, addictions counseling, psychological testing, and multicultural counseling, including counseling with sexual minorities. He has written extensively on various aspects of counseling, including the career development of ethnic, racial, and sexual minorities; violence in the schools; teaching career counseling; psychological testing; international issues in counseling; and the history of and public policy issues in professional counseling. He served as the editor of The Career Development Quarterly, the premier journal in career counseling, and is the past president of the American Counseling Association; National Career Development Association; Association for Gay, Lesbian, and Bisexual Issues in Counseling, and Society for the Psychological Study of LGBT Issues. He is a Fellow of the American Counseling Association, American Psychological Association, National Career Development Association, Society for the Psychological Study of LGBT Issues, Society for the Psychological Study of Ethnic Minority Issues, and Society of Counseling Psychology.

Jonathan Procter is an assistant professor of psychology at Marist College teaching in both the psychology and mental health programs in the School of Social & Behavioral Sciences. He is a Licensed Professional Counselor, a National Certified Counselor, and an Approved Clinical Supervisor. His research interests include the LGBT community, disability, multiculturalism, and social justice issues. His clinical experience includes both community and in-patient psychiatric populations including children, adolescents, and adults living with formidable behavioral, emotional, and mental disorders. He is active in state and national organizations including the American Counseling Association, Association for Counselor Education and Supervision, and the Association for Contextual Behavioral Science.

Michael S. Rankins, PhD, received his doctoral degree in 2008 from the University of Missouri–St. Louis. A former intern of the Victim Service Council and the Masters & Johnson Institute in St. Louis, Dr. Rankins has also served as a prevention coordinator with St. Louis Effort for AIDS, as a counselor with Hyland Behavioral Health at St. Anthony’s Medical Center, as Assistant Director of Student Life at UM–St. Louis, and as founder and Director of the Student Life Resource Centers at UM–St. Louis. Upon completion of his doctoral degree, he joined the faculty at Lindenwood University and is an associate professor in the Division of School and Professional Counseling. He continues to be involved in advocacy and community outreach and also remains dedicated to assisting those affected by HIV/AIDS. He is currently completing a book outlining his experiences with marriage equality efforts in San Francisco.

Carl J. Sheperis is chair of Counseling and Special Populations at Lamar University. He is author of Counseling Research and Foundations of Clinical Mental Health Counseling for Pearson. He serves as a director for NBCC and as associate editor for the Journal of Counseling & Development.

Donna S. Sheperis earned a PhD in counselor education from the University of Mississippi. A core faculty member in the Mental Health Counseling Program of Walden University, Dr. Sheperis is a Licensed Professional Counselor, National Certified Counselor, Certified Clinical Mental Health Counselor, and Approved Clinical Supervisor with over 20 years of experience in counseling settings. She has served as co-chair of the ACA Ethics Committee and is involved with the Association for Assessment and Research in Counseling, the Association for Humanistic Counseling, and the Association for Counselor Education and Supervision. Dr. Sheperis has authored numerous articles in peer-reviewed journals in addition to publishing her own books and chapters in edited texts. Dr. Sheperis presents regularly on topics related to counseling and has received several awards for her teaching, scholarship, and research.

Qi Shi, PhD, is an assistant professor in school counseling in the Education Specialties Department at Loyola University Maryland. Her research interests include using national longitudinal datasets in school counseling research, ESL students’ educational attainment, and multicultural competency of school counselors.

Brent Marriott Snow is the Provost and Vice President for Academic Affairs at Texas A&M University–San Antonio. He was the principle investigator of one of the six national transforming school counseling grants funded by the Wallace Reader’s Digest Fund administered through The Education Trust while at the University of West Georgia. His previous positions include Associate VPAA and Chair of the Department of Counseling and Educational Psychology at the University of West Georgia, a faculty member and coordinator of the counseling area faculty at Oklahoma State University, and a faculty member at the University of Idaho. He received his PhD from the University of Idaho, his MS degree from Oklahoma State University, his BS degree from Brigham Young University, and his Associate Degree from Boise College (now Boise State University).

Carolyn B. Stone is a professor at the University of North Florida, where she teaches and researches the legal and ethical implications for working with minors in schools. Prior to becoming a counselor educator, Dr. Stone was a supervisor of guidance, an elementary and secondary teacher, and elementary and high school counselor.

Mei Tang, PhD, LPC, is a professor in the counseling program of University of Cincinnati and has been a counselor educator since 1996. She obtained her doctoral degree from the University of Wisconsin–Milwaukee. Her teaching and research areas include multicultural issues in counseling, career development of minorities, assessment and research in counseling, internationalization of counselor training, and school counseling issues. In recent years, Dr. Tang has been applying an ecological counseling approach in her research and collaboration with local school and community agencies as well as cross-cultural settings.

Jerry Trusty is professor of counselor education and coordinator of the Secondary School Counseling Program in the Department of Educational Psychology, Counseling, and Special Education, at The Pennsylvania State University. Dr. Trusty has experience as a middle school and high school counselor. He has published numerous works on adolescents' educational and career development. Dr. Trusty recently completed his second term as Editor of Career Development Quarterly.

Lawrence E. Tyson, PhD, is an associate professor in the Department of Human Studies, Counselor Education Program at the University of Alabama at Birmingham. He is the school counseling advisor and was an American School Counselor Association Trainer for National Standards for School Counseling Programs. He is the primary author of Critical Incidents in School Counseling (1st & 2nd ed.), Critical Incidents in Supervision, and Critical Incidents in Group Counseling. Prior to joining the faculty at UAB, he worked as a professional school counselor in central Florida. Dr. Tyson was also a contributing task force member for the development of Alabama's first Comprehensive Counseling and Guidance Model for Alabama Public Schools. Dr. Tyson continues to investigate the effect of Alabama's model on the implementation of school counseling programs in Alabama.

Ann Vernon, PhD, is professor emerita, University of Northern Iowa, where she served as coordinator of the school and mental health counseling programs for many years. Dr. Vernon is the President of the Albert Ellis Board of Trustees and a member of the International Training Standards and Review committee at the Institute. She is the author of numerous books, chapters, and articles, including Thinking, Feeling, Behaving and What Works When With Children and Adolescents. She is internationally recognized as the leading expert on applications of RE&CBT with children and adolescents and conducts training programs on this topic in South America, Romania, Australia, and the United States.

Edward A. Wierzalis earned a PhD in counseling and supervision from the University of Virginia. He has professional counseling experience in both the school and community settings. He is presently a clinical associate professor and Coordinator of Clinical Field Experiences in the Department of Counseling at the University of North Carolina at Charlotte.

Chris Wood, PhD, is an associate professor in Old Dominion University's Counseling and Human Services department and the graduate program director for the distance learning program. He was most recently an associate professor at Seattle University (SU) and was previously a faculty member at the Ohio State University and the University of Arizona. In addition to being a counselor educator, Dr. Wood has experience as a high school counselor, a counseling/guidance department chair, a counselor/group leader at a residential youth facility for adjudicated youth/troubled teens, and a career counselor at an alternative school serving grades 7–12. He is currently the Head Editor for the Professional School Counseling journal, the flagship research journal for the American School Counseling Association (ASCA).

Robert E. Wubbolding, EdD, is the director of the Center for Reality Therapy in Cincinnati, Ohio; former director of training for the William Glasser Institute (1988–2011); and professor emeritus of Xavier University. A former elementary and high school counselor and adult basic education instructor, he is the author of 13 books on reality therapy, including Reality Therapy for the 21st Century. He has taught reality therapy in North America, North Africa, Asia, Europe, and the Middle East and has received the Marvin Rammelsberg Award, the Herman Peters Award, the Mary Corre Foster Award, and outstanding alumnus of the University of Cincinnati, College of Education.

Elias Zambrano, MA, is a retired certified school counselor and worked as a professional school counselor for 28 years. During that time, he also served as the Safe and Drug Free Schools and Communities Program Coordinator and then Director of Guidance Services for Northside Independent School District in San Antonio, TX. He currently serves as a clinical assistant professor in the counselor education and supervision program at the University of Texas at San Antonio.