

About the Author

Beth A. Kaufman received her B.A. and M.A. in speech-language pathology from Hofstra University in Hempstead, New York, and holds the Certificate of Clinical Competence from the American Speech-Language-Hearing Association. She has specialized in treating neurological impairments in adolescents and adults. Ms. Kaufman's clinical experiences have included rehabilitation, acute care, home health care, administration/supervision and private practice. She is the author of several articles on neurogenic communication disorders. Ms. Kaufman is currently in private practice and works full-time in a comprehensive neurorehabilitation center in Long Island, New York. When she's not working, she enjoys reading, writing, traveling and bicycling.

© copyrighted material by PRO-ED, Inc.