
About the Authors

Dr. Rick Parenté is a professor of psychology at Towson University in Baltimore, Maryland, where he regularly teaches graduate-level courses in neuropsychological assessment and neurotraining. He is also an adjunct assistant professor of physical medicine and rehabilitation at the Medical College of Virginia. He received a PhD in psychology from the University of New Mexico in 1975, and he completed a postdoctoral research fellowship in physiology at the University of Maryland Dental School Physiology Department in 1981. He is a licensed psychologist in Maryland and specializes in rehabilitation of brain functions after traumatic brain injury and stroke. He is certified as a Cognitive Rehabilitation Therapist (CPCRT) by the Society for Cognitive Rehabilitation.

Dr. Douglas Herrmann received his BS degree from the U.S. Naval Academy and joined the U.S. Marine Corps in 1964. He received a commendation for his service in Vietnam in 1967. He returned to school in 1968 and received his PhD in experimental psychology from the University of Delaware in 1972. After a postdoctoral fellowship in mathematical psychology at Stanford University in 1973, Dr. Herrmann served on the faculty of Hamilton College for 17 years, including as the chair of the psychology department for 4 years. From 1989 to 1995, he served as a research psychologist in the federal government for three agencies: the National Institute of Mental Health, the Bureau of Labor Statistics, and the National Center for Health Statistics. In 1995, he became the chair of the psychology department at Indiana State University, a position he held until August 2004. Since retiring from Indiana State University in May 2005, Dr. Herrmann has done some consulting about improving memory, written a column for the Tribune Star about improving cognition, written and published SuperMemory II with Mike Gruneberg, and done volunteer work with an organization that helps members of the National Guard find employment after serving in Iraq or Afghanistan.