

About the Author

Marcelle Richardson, MA, CCC-SLP, received her master's degree from San Diego State University. Currently, she is employed as a speech–language pathologist for the Cajon Valley School District, where she provides services to elementary-age students and develops curriculum for special day class students in her district. During her career, she has worked in a variety of settings, including private practice, and has been employed as clinical supervisor at San Diego State University. She has lectured and consulted throughout Southern California on a variety of topics, including stuttering, language intervention, and video modeling. She has received many awards, including the Outstanding Achievement Award from the California Speech-Language-Hearing Association.