

About the Authors

Gail J. Richard, Ph.D., CCC-SLP, is a Professor and Department Chair at Eastern Illinois University in Communication Disorders and Sciences. She received her Bachelor of Arts from Augustana College in Rock Island, Illinois, Master of Science from Eastern Illinois University, and Doctorate in Communication Disorders from Southern Illinois University-Carbondale. Gail's first professional employment was in the Iowa public schools as a speech-language pathologist where she worked with children with language-learning disabilities and preschoolers with emotional disorders. After four years in the schools, Gail joined the faculty at Eastern Illinois University where she has been a clinical supervisor and instructor dealing with various childhood language disabilities for 25 years.

Mary Anne Hanner, Ph.D., CCC-SLP, is Dean of the College of Sciences and Professor of Communication Disorders and Sciences at Eastern Illinois University. She received Bachelor and Master of Science degrees from Eastern Illinois University and a Doctorate in Educational Administration from Indiana State University. Mary Anne began her professional career as a speech-language pathologist in the elementary and secondary schools in rural central Illinois. After nine years in the school setting, she joined the faculty at Eastern Illinois University. During her 25 years at Eastern, Mary Anne has been a clinical instructor, served as Clinic Director and Department Chair, and has taught several courses in communication disorders and sciences.

Gail and Mary Anne are co-authors of the Language Processing Test–3. Since the publication of the first edition of the Language Processing Test in 1985, they have been associated with LinguiSystems, Inc. as authors and they appreciate LinguiSystems' assistance and support. The authors are pleased to have provided professionals in the field of Communication Disorders with insightful diagnostic and intervention tools for the past 20 years.
