

About the Author

David A. Daly, Ed. D., CCC, is Associate Professor of Speech-Language Pathology and Special Education at the University of Michigan, where he has served as director of the academic program, speech clinic, and director of Shady Trails residential camp for stutterers.

Currently, David publishes extensively in professional journals, lectures nationwide, and owns and operates a successful private practice in Livonia, Michigan, specializing in chronic stuttering and cluttering. In his 30-plus years of experience in public school, clinic, and private practice settings, David has helped hundreds of stutterers become independent, confident, and successful speakers.

In addition to his many professional interests, David also enjoys sailing and tennis. He is an inspiring and charismatic person who leaves his mark on those he meets with his unique sense of humor and zest for life's inevitable twists and turns.

The Source for Stuttering and Cluttering is a completely revised version of David's first publication with LinguSystems, The Freedom of Fluency.

October 1996

Cover Design: Jason Platt
Production Facility/Audio Tape Engineering: Chris Kolling
Michelle L. Burnett appears on the cluttering portion of the CD
Cassette reengineering: Brass Sail