

About the Authors

John D. Tonkovich, PhD, CCC-SLP/A, is an associate professor of special education at Eastern Michigan University and a speech–language pathologist in private practice in Shelby Township, Michigan. He has written and presented extensively in the areas of neurogenic speech and language disorders.

Terry L. Boettcher, MA, CCC-SLP, is a speech–language pathologist in private practice in Atlanta, Georgia. She has had extensive clinical experience working with adults and children and has co-authored two highly successful therapy programs for adults with neurogenic disorders.

Mary W. Rambow, MA, CCC-SLP, is a clinical instructor of communication disorders at Georgia State University in Atlanta, Georgia. She has extensive clinical, teaching, and supervisory experience in speech–language pathology, and has co-authored several widely used treatment programs for adults with neurogenic communication disorders.