

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

Jennifer J. McComas is an assistant professor of special education in the Department of Educational Psychology at the University of Minnesota, where she heads the licensure program for teachers of students with Emotional Behavior Disorders (EBD). She teaches courses in classroom management, applied behavior analysis, social and emotional characteristics of children and youth with disabilities, and academic and behavioral assessment and intervention for children and youth with learning and behavior disorders. She received her doctorate at the University of Iowa and was a postdoctoral fellow at the University of Pennsylvania. Her major interests include the application of behavior analysis to instruction and behavioral problem solving with children in educational settings. Dr. McComas has published numerous research-based articles related to instructional strategies and behavioral interventions for children and adults with developmental and other disabilities as well as book chapters on conducting functional behavioral assessment.

© copyrighted material by PRO-ED, INC.